

(Schmeling, 3.)

(18)

By the 16 Decbr

4° Ms. hist. G.H. 2
[Schmeling, G.F.]

1766

resp. d. 20. Xbr

Sir -

Tho I know it is a great liberty in a lady to Repe to a Gentleman who is offended at her, yet
I'll venture to take hold of my pen - poor Mr.
Raspe - what you are angry with me - well -
I dont know how to make it up again tho I cant say but you have had a good deal of patience yet
I did not think it wold have been gone all at once, but how ever if you ~~had~~ wear be determine to be angry you shal have let me know be fore hand, that I might have prepare'd my self for it.
but what did I say - you to be angry - no that can never be, such a Gentle man as Mr Raspe Does not once know what it is to be angry. ~~to be~~ =