

a picture of the man, in all his varied relations. The picture is full of life and reality. I notice more than at first some defects in the translation, as well as some important typographical errors. I will, should the publisher desire it, correct these errors for the next edition.

The translation is in the main very faithful, and in clear and beautiful English.

Mrs. Hovey remembers her charming evening at your house, as one of the most delightful within her Recollection.

She has sent her greetings in a Christmas card, which I hope will reach you safely.

Mr. White is here, and lecturing regularly. I think he will not engage in politics or diplomacy again.

With cordial regards to your Professor Grinnell. Dear, faithfully yours Professor Dr. H. Grinnell. W. P. Hovey.
